1. WELCOME FROM THE PRESIDENT

Many thanks for your interest in a career at University College Cork (UCC).

Originally founded in 1845 as "Queen's College Cork", UCC is one of Ireland's oldest institutions of higher learning. Our spectacular campus situated in a global tourist destination, and serves a community that is both local and global. Ranked in the top 2% of universities worldwide, UCC was named as Ireland’s Sunday Times University of the Year in 2016, and again in 2017, the only Irish university to receive this designation in consecutive years. UCC was honoured to be named the World’s First Green University Campus (Federation for Environmental Education, Copenhagen).

UCC has an ancient heritage with a modern focus. Our own Professor Michael J. O’Kelly excavated the world’s oldest astronomically aligned structure at Newgrange. Our first Professor of Mathematics, George Boole, wrote his “Laws of Thought” here, which provides the basis for all modern-day computer science.

Our graduates are found excelling in every walk of life throughout the world, from poet to politician, from nuclear scientist to philosopher. Today, UCC’s student body of some 20,000 includes over 2,800 from 100 countries across all continents. We employ 2,700 professionals. Over one third of our academic staff have come from overseas. We enjoy many accolades as a high quality employer. The true strength of our university lies in the people who work and study here. The diversity of our workforce and our students is our competitive edge in realising our mission to “create, preserve, and communicate knowledge and to enhance intellectual, cultural, social and economic life locally, regionally and globally.”

Our vision - UCC a contemporary Irish University with a global outlook will, I trust, prove attractive to you. This briefing pack contains information which I hope will be useful and informative should you be selected to attend for interview here in Cork.

I trust that your experience of our recruitment process will be a positive one and I thank you, again, for considering a career at University College Cork.

Professor Patrick G O’Shea

Department of Music

The Department of Music at UCC is committed to the cultivation – through creativity in teaching, research, composition and performance – of a dynamic learning community dedicated to an interdisciplinary and cross-cultural understanding of music.

The Department of Music, above the River Lee

The Department is housed in the historic St Vincent’s Monastery on Sunday’s Well Road, building no. 74 on the campus map at:
The site commands panoramic views over the River Lee, UCC’s main campus and much of Cork City. The building includes a small hall which can be used for performances and conferencing, a number of teaching rooms and practice rooms, student computing facilities and a computer music studio. There is a collection of instruments, including some historical keyboards, Irish traditional instruments and Ireland’s earliest gamelan, Nyai Sekar Madu Sari (Venerable Flower of Honey Essence, built in 1994), all of which are in regular teaching use. There is a nationally significant archive of Irish traditional music, and the Department also hosts the (privately held) Archive for Irish Traditional Dance.

The academic staff of the department currently comprises one professor, seven full time staff, four part time staff, three postdoctoral fellows, and a large number of tutors, many of whom are internationally established performers of Irish traditional music. A broad range of specialisms reflects a commitment to the equality of all musics and approaches. They are supported by two administrators and a technical officer. The current student body comprises 170 undergraduates, 26 Masters student and 6 PhDs, plus a number of visiting students.

The Department of Music at UCC has attracted a disproportionate amount of funding and other accolades. Members of its staff have achieved considerable success with funding from the Irish Research Council, the Arts Council of Ireland, Marie Curie fellowships and other sources. Staff and students have won a number of local and national awards, including the UCC President’s Award for Excellence in Teaching and Learning, 5 CACSSS PhD Excellence Awards, the Boole International Scholarship for PhD Research.
Current Degree Programmes

Undergraduates in Music at UCC enrol on the three-year BA (Hons) in Arts-Music. This is the most musically diverse undergraduate programme on offer in Ireland, so preparing students for engagement with and employment in the diversity and vitality of the contemporary musical world. On the BA, students gain a rich experience and understanding of music in historical contexts and in contemporary society, integrating practical study alongside academic and theoretical courses. Students have a considerable choice of music-related options, allowing them to build up a distinctive profile as a musicologist, ethnomusicologist, composer, sound artist, songwriter, performer, producer, educator or worker within the cultural and music industries.

BA Arts-Music students take a minimum of 30 credits per year in Music plus study in one or more other subject areas offered at UCC, and they can extend their studies by building in a year of overseas study in Europe or further afield. At the end of Year 1, students may also transfer to the BMus, a four-year degree where they entirely specialize in Music throughout Years 2-4.

Further details on the BA: http://www.ucc.ie/en/ck104/

Undergraduate and postgraduate students take part in CAVE (Cork Audio Visual Ensemble, a live interactive digital music performance group)

There are also undergraduate Certificate and Diploma courses in Music, and up to 250 international visiting students per year take one or more modules in Music. Many of these students are from North America, with others from continental Europe taking advantage of UCC’s numerous Erasmus scheme agreements to study in Ireland.

The following postgraduate taught courses are currently on offer:

- MA Experimental Sound Practice: https://www.ucc.ie/en/cke78/

Each course reflects the Department’s aim to provide distinctive, cutting-edge instruction to graduates in areas of internationally recognised disciplinary (and interdisciplinary) strength.

Research degree programmes are well established and offer diverse options for doctoral study:

- PhD and MPhil (Music)
- PhD and MPhil in Original Composition (Music)
- PhD in Creative Performance
- PhD in Creative Practice

Research Activity

The Department of Music is one of the pre-eminent departments for music research in Ireland. It offers a distinctive, stimulating and rich environment in several primary areas of contemporary music research, particularly ethnomusicology, musicology, popular music studies, composition and other sonic arts, improvisation and performance. Within each area, our research extends across a range of subfields and interdisciplinary vectors, and all staff are encouraged and supported in building or maintaining a leadership position in their respective areas of research activity.

Individual staff research pages can be accessed via http://research.ucc.ie/profiles/A021 and these contain details of publications, research grants and other initiatives, whether individual or involving teams at UCC or elsewhere.

The Department hosts a weekly research seminar series in term-time with visiting speakers from Ireland, Europe, North America and further afield. Many of the concert performances in the weekly FUAIM [Irish, n. sound, noise] series are genuinely research oriented too and reflect the diversity of the department.

We host a wide range of national and international annual conferences, symposia and workshops. Many staff act as conference team members within Ireland and abroad. Several are members of the boards of academic societies and of journal advisory boards, and some serve on grant review panels nationally and internationally. Others are active as reviewers for books (pre- and post-publication), as external examiners for undergraduate, PGT and PGR programmes, and as editors of scholarly journals.

Several staff are composers and performers with extensive national and international profiles.

A departmental scheme for research planning is in place, and staff can bid for a departmental grant toward any aspect of their research (with the Research Committee distributing an allocation of €4,500 between applicants). Further support is available at CACSSS and University level, and via external funders, including the Irish Research Council, the European Research Council, and the Arts Council of Ireland.

Currently, two staff are involved in large-scale European Research Council grants from the European Union. Links to individual staff pages are at http://www.music.ucc.ie/index.php?/staff/.

Cultural Contributions

The Department of Music plays a pivotal role in the vibrant cultural life of the University and the city of Cork. Our series of professional concerts is open to the public, as are our Degree final recitals, and are notable for the diversity of musics represented. Staff and students alike perform regularly throughout the region and further afield, many of them at high professional level. The Department hosts Artists in Residence in both classical music and Irish Traditional Music.
Activities initiated within the Department have meanwhile spread into the community. Excellent recent examples include the rise of a Sacred Harp singing tradition, which developed out of classes first initiated inside the Department, and the creation of Cork Community Gamelan, commissioned by Music Generation in partnership with UCC Music Department. Staff and students are engaged with Cork’s unique Sound Art and Improvisation scheme. Staff also work closely with various national and local organisations including Music Generation, the Arts Council, the Higher Education Authority, Cork City and County Councils and various traditional music institutions.

UCC Creative

UCC has committed in its strategic plan to developing UCC Creative, a space for research, learning and practice in the creative arts. This initiative is currently under active development and will provide:

- enhanced support for existing, extensive campus-based and outreach activities in the creative and community arts;
- development of the creative hub, a dedicated arts practice and research space;
- augmentation of its programme of innovative arts practice research, which will act as a bridge between the academic work of the University and the Irish and international creative arts and technologies sectors; and
- curation of dynamic and creative contributions to the Decade of Commemorations.

UCC Creative promises a beneficial synergy with the Irish Government’s ‘Creative Ireland’ 5-year plan.
Musicology at UCC

Ireland has a reputation for rebelliousness, and Cork is its Rebel City. It is no surprise, then, that UCC Department of Music is something of a rebel department, encamped on high ground, towering above UCC’s beautiful central campus on the River Lee. UCC Music is a bit of a rogue due to its long-held commitment to the equal valuation of all music cultures and traditions, from the classical canon to Irish trad and global traditional musics, popular musics, jazz, and emergent musics. University College Cork’s musicologists set aside the standard music history sequence still common to many undergraduate programmes at the beginning of the twenty-first century. We share a radical and critical understanding of music as a human practice that reflects a culture and has the potential to shape it. Our MA in Music and Cultural History is effectively a manifesto for musicologies of the future. It is a revolutionary postgraduate programme in musicology. With this post, we seek to build on this vision at undergraduate and postgraduate levels, so expanding and reinvigorating our offerings in popular music studies.

At UCC, students explore a diverse range of musics, past and present, from early music and the Western canon, to jazz, film music and popular musics. Students draw upon performance studies and critical cultural theories, and gain fluency with the methodological tools to study manuscripts, use archives, and perform close readings of multimedia texts. Our students write final research projects, MA theses, and PhD dissertations ranging from studies of the songs of Jehan de Lescurel in the Roman de Fauvel and gender representations in Mozart’s Don Giovanni, to performance studies of the forgotten “father of Western Swing,” Milton Brown, the mediated experience of the iTunes Music Store, intertextuality in Quentin Tarantino’s Inglorious Basterds, and postcolonial Irish hip hop.

All of this takes place against a thriving music culture. The Rebel City’s own music history ranges from UCC composer, Aloys Fleischmann, and renowned Irish trad revivalist, Seán Ó Riada, to famed blues-rock guitarist, Rory Gallagher, and our students embody this rich history, performing (and often fusing) classical, jazz, traditional musics, rock, pop, and edm in the city’s rich music scene. The 2005 European Capital of Culture hosts large-scale international festivals like the West Cork Chamber Music Festival, East Cork Early Music, IndieCork Film and Music Festival, Cork Jazz Festival, Cork Folk Festival, smaller festivals of avant-garde music and culture, like the Quiet Music Festival and the Avant, and popular music festivals like It Takes a Village and the new internationally acclaimed Sounds from a Safe Harbour (curated by The National’s Bryce Dessner). The city is also home to major performing arts organisations including the Triskel Arts Centre and Cork Opera House, and UCC Music organises an unusually varied concert series in venues across the city.

Current Full-Time Staff in Musicology

Dr Melanie L. Marshall (Course Coordinator), BMus (Edinburgh), MA, PhD (Southampton). Dr Marshall is a musicologist specialising in sixteenth-century Italian music, and in issues of gender and sexuality in music (including contemporary popular music).
Professor J. Griffith Rollefson, BA (Macalester College), MM composition (Bowling Green State University), MM musicology (Bowling Green State University), PhD (Wisconsin-Madison). Dr Rollefson is a musicologist specialising in popular music studies, notably concerning global hip hop, jazz and blues, and in American and other modern musics.

Dr Danijela Kulezic-Wilson, BMus (Belgrade), PhD (Ulster), a musicologist specialising in comparative arts, film music and the musical poetics of film.

Dr Jillian Rogers, BM (University of Denver), MFA Musicology (Brandeis University), PhD Musicology (UCLA). Dr Rogers is a musicologist who specialises in nineteenth- and early-twentieth-century European and American musical cultures, as well as in how people have historically used music as a way of coping with grief and trauma.

There are additionally a number of staff in Music and in UCC more widely with an established interest in musicology.

On-site resources for musicological work include, a composition and music technology lab and a new state-of-the-art recording studio with a live room equipped with a full complement popular musical gear (drum set, percussion, synths, guitars, amplifiers, etc.). Mobile recording gear (and support in its use) is available from the Departmental Technician. A number of non-western musical instruments are also available for teaching use, including Ireland’s earliest gamelan, a collection of Indian instruments, West African drums, as well as many Irish traditional instruments, some early music instruments, keyboard, percussion, and bass.
The Department is host to two archives, one dedicated to traditional music, the other to traditional dance. The Department’s Traditional Music Archive houses more than 2,000 items of original field recordings collected over the past 40 years by both students and staff of the Department, plus recordings of concerts and events, plus dissertations, photographs, old instruments and ephemera. It attracts visitors from UCC and from many other institutions. The (privately held) Archive of Traditional Dance offers a rich body materials for those researching Irish dance and its music. Further materials are held in the main library collections. Among these, material from the O'Neill/Henebry digitisation project is now available online.

From the Henebry / O'Neill collection of wax cylinders

There are numerous research centres at University College Cork, listed here. Among them, the Marginalised and Endangered Worldviews Study Centre (MEWSC) and the Institute for Social Science in the 21st Century (ISS21) might both appeal strongly to the appointee in terms of forming future research groupings and alliances Ireland’s second city, Cork is home to an increasingly diverse population, which offers many opportunities for new ethnomusicological study. It is also located at the centre of an area rich in Irish traditional musical heritage, and further areas, for example the Muskerry Gaeltacht, renowned for its sean-nós singing tradition, lie in close proximity. The Sliabh Luachra area, which straddles the borders of Cork and Kerry, is highly respected for its unique musical style. Cork is also celebrated for its piping tradition, being the location of the first Uilleann Piper’s Club in the world, founded in 1898.

UCC was established in 1845 as one of three Queen’s Colleges at Cork, Galway and Belfast. The site chosen for the college is particularly appropriate given its connection with the patron saint of Cork, St Finbarr. It is believed his monastery and school stood on the bank of the river Lee, which runs through the lower grounds of the University. University College Cork (UCC) is the principal university in the province of Munster and the largest outside Dublin.

UCC, provides over 120 degree and professional programmes through some 60 Disciplines.

The University offers an innovative, research-led curriculum, taught by world-class academics that consistently attracts a quality student intake. The University has a recurrent budget of €280 million. UCC comprises four Colleges:

- Arts, Celtic Studies and Social Sciences
- Business and Law
- Medicine and Health
- Science, Engineering and Food Science

UCC employs some 2,700 staff. The University is committed to building its capacity to carry out research of the highest international quality, and to providing research-lead teaching across the breadth of disciplines and specialisms typical of a traditional university. UCC prides itself on close connections with the professions, industry and the local community. Further information on Academic and Administrative Departments can be found on the UCC web site. The home page address is www.ucc.ie.

The University is directly funded by the Higher Education Authority (HEA), receives grant, fees and other income. Research income has for many years have been the highest in the State (in 2010-11 €80m). The University budgetary strategy continues to focus on decreasing its reliance on Exchequer income and promoting income generation through increasing post graduate and international fee income.

It has benefited very substantially (over half a billion euro) over the past ten years from national programmes aimed at developing research infrastructure, capacity and output, mainly funded through the National Development Plan and in line with the Government’s Strategy for Science, Technology and Innovation. UCC has thus developed its key role in plans for the long-term economic and social development of the region and the country.

The University contains a number of highly prestigious research centres including the Alimentary Pharmabiotics Centre – www.ucc.ie/research/apc and the Tyndall National Institute. See http://www.tyndall.ie/. Indeed in early 2013, the University has been extremely successful in a recent SFI Research Centre programme, the largest joint state/industry research investment (€300m) in Irish history: UCC is to lead four of the seven centres, co-lead a fifth and is partner in the remaining two centres.

GOVERNANCE

The functions of the University are performed under the direction of the Governing Body. The Academic Council, subject to the financial constraints determined by the Governing Body and to review by it, controls the academic affairs of the University. The main executive management group is the University Management Team, which works in support of the President.

University College Cork (UCC) was selected as Ireland’s University of the Year 2011/12 by The Sunday Times. This award was given for a number of reasons including recognition of the University’s position as the leading research institution in Ireland; the University’s cosmopolitan character which encompasses an admirable student mix; the excellence of UCC’s teaching and academic standards and the University’s links with business and industry.

The Sunday Times award, which was the third occasion UCC received the award, followed on the heels of UCC becoming the only Irish university to achieve the unique status of Ireland’s first five star university.

UCC is also the first university campus to be awarded the Green Flag for an environmentally friendly campus in a student-led innovation. UCC is proud of its achievement as the world’s first university to achieve the ISO 50001 standard in energy management systems.

Medical Insurance

There is no state run statutory medical insurance scheme in Ireland. Hospital medical treatment is generally speaking, free while visits to general practitioners cost around €60 each and all prescription medicines must be paid for. However many people choose to avail of private medical insurance to cover the cost of upgraded hospital treatment and to avoid sometimes lengthy waiting lists. There are three established medical insurance companies active in Ireland at present as follows:-

VHI - www.vhi.ie

Laya Healthcare - www.layahealthcare.ie

Aviva Health Insurance - www.avivahealth.ie

These companies offer tailor made health care plans which can be selected by employees according to their requirements. Subscriptions can be deducted from salary payments. Competitive rates are available to UCC staff. Further information is available on these providers via the Department of Human Resources.
The differences in cover between the various plans are highly complex. Contacting each company to assess which plan may be most suitable for your individual needs is best.

Personal Taxation
